

If you experience lupus symptoms like rash and sun sensitivity, you may qualify to participate in a new clinical trial.

Clinical trials may help to find new potential investigational drugs for conditions like lupus. We've partnered with Antidote to share a trial opportunity that might interest you. This trial is testing whether a potential targeted therapy is safe and effective to help lupus symptoms including skin issues related to the disease.

You may be able to take part if you:

- Have a diagnosis of CLE (with or without SLE), or diagnosis of SLE, which includes:
 - CLE with active skin sores with inflammation and scarring especially on the face, ears and scalp, or an active rash that was brought on after exposure to sunlight and/or
 - SLE with active skin activity/ involvement
- Do not have chronic kidney disease or lupus nephritis

Learn more and see if you may qualify:

<http://bit.ly/lupustrial>

If this trial isn't right for you, use Antidote's clinical trial search tool to search for other trial opportunities in your area:

www.antidote.me

